Product: (CCCN)	Country or group maintaining measures:	Countries indicating an interest:
Beet sugar and cane sugar, solid (17.01)	Australia	Japan Romania United States

(a) Description:

The importation of sugar is prohibited (except with the consent in writing of the Commonwealth Minister for Primary Industry or an officer authorized by him) under the Sugar Agreement Act.

(b) Comments by other countries:

Japan: As Australia is the second largest (after Cuba) sugar exporter, it is difficult to understand why there is a prohibition.

(c) Comments by country maintaining the measures:

Legislation prohibiting the import of sugar has been in force for many years. The measures in relation to imports are an integral part of production and marketing arrangements for Australia's sugar industry under which production and prices as well as imports are closely controlled.

Product: (CCCN)	Country or group maintaining measures:	Countries indicating an interest:
Other sugars; sugar syrops; artificial honey ...; caramel (17.02)	Australia	Romania United Kingdom

(a) Description:

The importation of syrup (17.02.900) is prohibited (except with the consent in writing of the Commonwealth Minister for Primary Industry or an officer authorized by him) under the Sugar Agreement Act.

(b) Comments by other countries:

United Kingdom: A useful market for United Kingdom syrups could be developed in Australia if the prohibition were removed, especially for high quality golden syrup. This product would sell at a higher price than the Australian product, and thus would not offer price competition. As a major exporter to the United Kingdom benefiting from membership in the Commonwealth Sugar Agreement, Australia has the capacities to import useful quantities of this non-competitive United Kingdom product.

(c) Comments by the country maintaining the measures:

Legislation prohibiting the import of sugar and syrup has been in force for many years. The measures in relation to imports are an integral part of production and marketing arrangements for Australia's sugar industry under which production and prices as well as imports are closely controlled.
