

Sir,

The Delegations of Germany and the Dominican Republic met on the 13th of February 1951 in exploratory talks in order to ascertain whether there existed a basis for negotiations between Germany and the Dominican Republic.

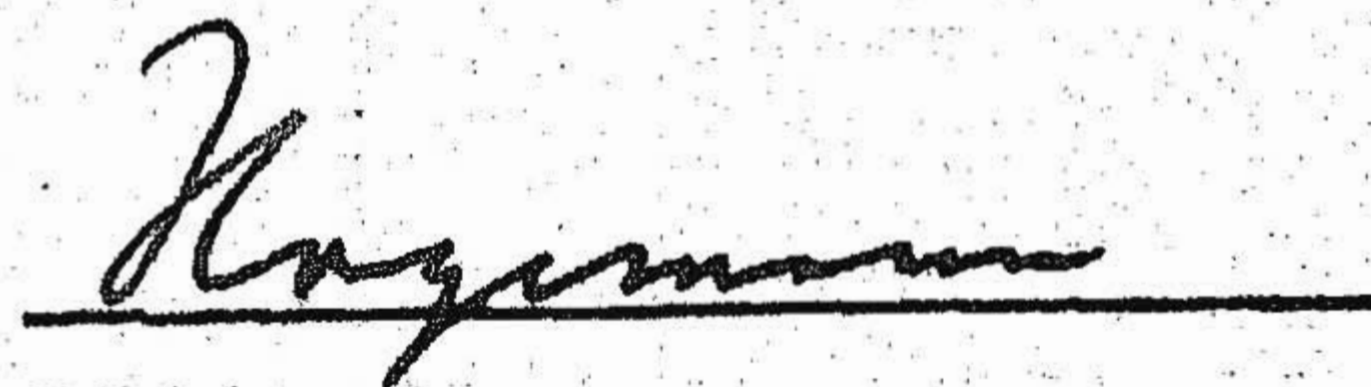

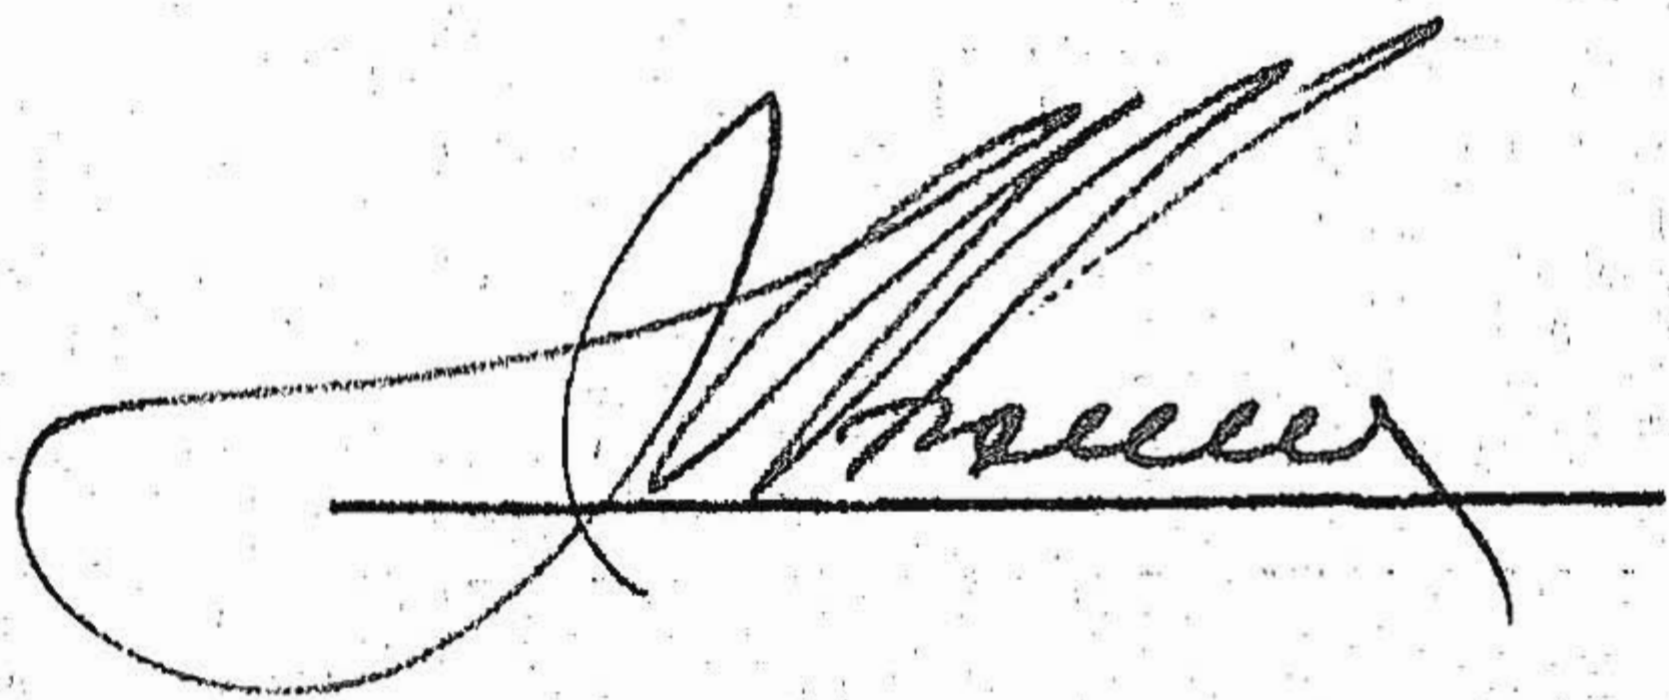

After an exchange of views and information, it was felt that the present circumstances do not require direct tariff negotiations between the two countries, and it was therefore agreed to reconsider this matter at a later opportunity.

The two Delegations confirmed, however, that their Governments will grant each other Most-Favoured-Nation treatment in accordance with the provisions of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.
