World trade of commercial services decreased by 6% in the first quarter of 2020 compared to the previous quarter, as measured in seasonally adjusted terms.

Global services trade saw a sharp decline in 2020 Q1 as the Covid-19 pandemic began to spread. Asia, which saw the first cases of the novel coronavirus in late 2019 was the first to issue stay-at-home orders for its population and recorded a -10% decline in commercial services exports and -11% decline in imports. North America recorded a decline of only 4% in exports given the later impact of the virus in the region.
