OBJECTIVES

The Global Aid-for-Trade Review has three objectives: to take stock of what is happening on Aid for Trade; to identify what should happen next; and to improve WTO monitoring and evaluation.

Taking stock of what is happening

The first objective is to draw together the various monitoring inputs into a coherent picture. Members will have an opportunity to examine and discuss the results of the “three tiers” of monitoring – the global numbers, and the partner- and donor-country self assessments, summarized in the joint WTO-OECD Aid for Trade at a Glance 2007. The Report and Recommendations of the three Regional Reviews in Lima, Peru for Latin America and the Caribbean, in Manila Philippines for Asia and the Pacific, and Dar es Salaam for Africa will also be discussed.

Identifying what should happen next

The second objective is to shift the focus from analysing needs and priorities, to implementing responses. Donors, agencies and partner countries will be encouraged to identify key objectives and to discuss how they should be met – including their national and regional strategies. Another focus will be the recommendations of the regional reviews which include proposals to (i) encourage countries and sub-regions to map out key constraints and priorities (ii) develop country and sub-regional action plans, (iii) create a regional Aid-for-Trade network to help map priorities and develop plans; and (iv) set out a roadmap for assessing progress and implementing results. Examining progress on current Aid-for-Trade initiatives such as the STDF, Trade Facilitation and Trade Financing will also be highlighted. The aim is to use WTO monitoring – the spotlight effect – to create incentives for key actors to provide more and better Aid for Trade. The aim is not to tell countries and agencies how to achieve these objectives.

Better monitoring and evaluating progress

The third objective is to begin examining how to better monitor and evaluate progress – by launching a work programme aimed at developing qualitative targets for improving trade capacity. While this year has mainly been focused on establishing a system for measuring Aid-for-Trade flows, more conceptual work needs to be undertaken on the qualitative assessment of Aid for Trade, and on identifying indicators or benchmarks that can better measure results and encourage mutual accountability. The main proposal is to hold an Experts Symposium on Aid-for-Trade Evaluation and indicators in the late Spring/early Summer. The aim will be to build on existing approaches and mechanisms, so key actors in this area, such as the World Bank and the OECD, will be encouraged to play a lead role.

GLOBAL REVIEW OF AID FOR TRADE
HIGH-LEVEL SEGMENT

EXAMINING THE RESULTS AT YEAR ONE

This session will provide an overview of what has been learned from the first year of Aid-for-Trade monitoring, with a focus on global flows and the result of the donor- and partner-country self-assessments. It is also an opportunity to outline where the monitoring mechanism can be improved – including by launching a work programme aimed at developing qualitative targets for expanding trade capacity. Key questions include:

- Trade strategies – including trade capacity building – must be country owned and driven to be successful. Are partner-countries making trade and competitiveness a priority in their development strategies? What needs to change? What can others do to assist?
- The overall ODA envelope needs to grow so that increasing Aid for Trade does not crowd out other development priorities such as health and education. What progress is being made in meeting Hong Kong and Gleneagles commitments? What are the current trends? What is the role and impact of non-DAC donors? How can we improve the effectiveness and predictability of Aid-for-Trade flows?
- More and better Aid for Trade only makes sense if it can be shown to contribute to increasing developing countries’ capacity to trade or competitiveness. There is a clear need to measure progress in meeting these objectives. Should we launch a work programme on evaluation, starting with an Experts Symposium in late Spring?

10 am – 11 am

Global summary and report
- Pascal Lamy, Director-General, WTO

Making Aid for Trade work
- Angel Gurria, Secretary General, OECD

AID FOR TRADE AND THE DEVELOPMENT AGENDA

This session will provide an opportunity for key multilateral agencies and bilateral donors to outline their vision, priorities and plans for Aid for Trade – followed by comments and questions from Members. Key questions include:

- Why should Aid for Trade be a priority for countries and regions?
- What is your Aid for Trade strategy and how does it fit into your wider development assistance policy?
- How much Aid for Trade do you provide – and do you envisage this increasing in the future?
- What scope is there for expanding public/private partnerships?
11 am – 12 noon

Multilateral Strategies

- Robert Zoellick, President, World Bank (lead speaker)
- Dominique Strauss-Kahn, Managing Director, IMF
- Kemal Dervis, Administrator, UNDP
- Donald Kaberuka, President, AfDB
- Luis Alberto Moreno, President, IADB

- Anne Stenhammer, State Secretary for International Development, Norway
- Wang Shichun, Director General, Department of Foreign Aid, Ministry of Commerce, China

THE WAY FORWARD AND FUTURE PLANS

This session is focused on generating a dialogue among partner countries, donors, and agencies about next steps in the three regions. The moderators will provide a brief summary of the regional reviews and their recommendations – to which panellists will be invited to respond. At the national and regional level, the importance of country ownership, mainstreaming, agreeing on key priorities, improving regional approaches, and developing strategies to meet these objectives will be highlighted. Interactive dialogue with – and contributions from – the wider audience will be encouraged. Key questions include:

- What are the main themes – or objectives – identified by the reviews?
- What can countries, donors and agencies do to help meet these objectives?
- The reports outline key recommendations – or a roadmap – for moving forward. Do panellists and participants broadly agree with the proposals? Are there ways they can be improved or built upon?
2.30 pm – 4 pm
