CHALLENGES

- It is challenging when Spanish or French speaking countries notifies to specific English-speaking country without unofficial translation.
- Some countries provide a link that takes you to their website instead of directly to the notified document which might be difficult to navigate the website.
- Countries that notifies regulations that does not conform to the relevant international standard without being descriptive.

POTENTIAL SOLUTIONS

- It will be helpful when the notifying countries would also provide unofficial translation particularly when notifying specifically to English speaking countries.
- It will be advisable for Spanish and French countries when notifying specifically to English speaking to provide links that will take you directly to the notified regulation instead of the website.
- When notifying a proposed regulation that does not conform to the relevant international standard it will be helpful for a description to be provided for ease of reference.
