

Carmen Rodriguez Hernandez is a pharmacist with specialization in Microbiology applied to the Quality control of Food, Cosmetics, medicines and Biologicals and Sanitary Pharmacology.

Currently, she is Team lead of vaccines PQ within the WHO Prequalification Programme, RPQ. As part of the work in WHO, responsible for the initial assessment of vaccines submitted as part of the prequalification and vaccines under EUL and also postPQ and EUL monitoring activities. She is also responsible for the risk benefit assessment of snake antivenoms.

She has thirty-two years of experience in the area of regulation of biologicals, including Quality Control of vaccines, blood products and recombinant products. Rodriguez Hernandez has written several publications in the area of quality control of vaccines. She participated in the revision of the Venezuelan regulations of Pharmaceutical and Biologicals, as well as Coordination of activities for the Latin-American network, PAHO, in Washington, DC.

She has participated in several International conferences and workshops as lecturer and facilitator and in the assessment of National regulatory Authorities located in the Americas, Europe and Asia.

