ITALIAN SPECIAL CUSTOMS TREATMENT FOR CERTAIN LIBYAN PRODUCTS

Thirteenth Annual Report (1965) Submitted by the Government of Italy

1. Under their Decision of 9 October 1952, the CONTRACTING PARTIES to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade waived the provisions of paragraph 1 of Article I of the General Agreement to permit the Government of Italy to grant special customs treatment to certain products of Libya until 31 December 1955.

The validity of the Decision was extended, with a few amendments, by the Decisions of 25 November 1955, 20 November 1958, 16 November 1961, and lastly, the Decision of 25 January 1965 by which the Italian Government was authorized to apply the special customs treatment until 31 December 1967 to the products included in the annexed list.

In the same Decision of 25 January 1965, it was established that the situation should be reviewed by the CONTRACTING PARTIES before the end of 1967.

In compliance with the Decision of 9 October 1952, the Italian Government has the honour to present herewith to the CONTRACTING PARTIES a statement on the development of trade between Italy and Libya, under the special treatment, in 1964 as compared with earlier years.

2. The statistics given in the following table give a general picture of the development of Italy's imports from Libya and from all other third countries of products receiving special customs treatment, as well as products admitted duty free with no distinction as to origin or those subject to import duties upon admission into Italy.

It may be seen in particular that Italian imports from Libya under special customs treatment have increased slightly in relation to 1963, but that they are still well below the level reached in 1962.

Imports of these products still represent a small proportion of imports of the same products from all sources (2.2 per cent), and they represent only 1.4 per cent of Italy's total imports from Libya.

3. From the three tables annexed hereto a more detailed analysis can be made of the structure and development of Italy's imports from Libya in the three years referred to.

Table I shows that, among the products receiving special customs treatment, the principal increase in imports from Libya is in respect of groundnuts (29,814 quintals in 1964 as compared with 17,808 in 1963 and 20,681 in 1962 for groundnuts in shell; 2,195 quintals in 1964 as compared with nil in 1963 and 277 in 1962 for shelled groundnuts). In the same sector, however, there has been a sharp decline in imports of castor seeds (24,812 quintals in 1964 as compared with 40,073 in 1963 and 25,820 in 1962) and there have been no imports of vegetable oils (olive oil and castor oil).

There has been a more or less appreciable increase in imports of fresh fish and casings. The reduction in tunny fish imports was fairly marked.

Whereas imports of products receiving special customs treatment continued in 1964 at about the same level as in 1963 (883 million lire as compared with 848 million), there was on the other hand a considerable increase in Italy's imports from Libya of products admitted duty free (44.5 million lire as compared with 25.8 million in 1963); as may be seen from the data in Table II, however, this development can be attributed almost entirely to increased purchases of crude petroleum oils (44 million lire as compared with 25.2 million in 1963).

There was also an increase in Italian imports from Libya of dutiable products (501.1 million lire as compared with 316.2 million in 1963). The increase was mainly in respect of fresh citrus fruit, crude lead, and flying machines (see Table III).

4. The evolution of Italy's imports from Libya shows clearly that, leaving aside purchases of crude oil, products receiving special customs treatment continue to occupy an important place in Libya's export trade towards Italy.

It is beyond dispute that, because of the development and very considerable volume of exports of crude petroleum oils in the past few years, the Libyan economy has received a boost whose influence on the country's general economic development possibilities will certainly be appreciable in coming years. But if one considers the efforts still to be made in Libya in the various production sectors in order to strengthen the competitive position of other products intended for export, the maintenance of the special customs treatment still seems to be an instrument which can effectively contribute towards improving Libya's economic situation.

Furthermore, the special customs treatment does not seem to have caused any appreciable damage to trade of other contracting parties. In 1964, imports receiving special customs treatment accounted for only 2.2 per cent of Italy's imports of the same products from other third countries. If there has been any reduction in exports by these countries to Italy, it is due to the general contraction in Italian imports.
